REFLECTION ON TODAY'S READINGS: *Keeping God's Commandments

If we love God, we will make efforts to keep His commandments. The devil strives to make believers do things that are contrary to God's will so as to put in them hatred and disloyalty to God. In the first reading, we read of how Adam attempted to hide himself from the presence of God having offended God's will. Original Sin per se soured humanity's relationship with God. However, God's boundless love announced in the Garden of Eden the redemption of the world through the seed of the woman who crushed the head of the serpent. It therefore hurts that the scribes who came from Jerusalem said Jesus casts out demons by the prince of demons. They refused to acknowledge the power of God over Satan and that explains their sin against the Holy Spirit as evidenced by the gospel reading of today. Believers should take to heart the words of Saint Paul in the Second Reading by not allowing themselves to be governed by the passing things of earth but by the eternal things of heaven.
